WORDS FAILED HIM — WHEN HE NEEDED THEM MOST!

SHERWIN CODY

What Are YOUR Mistakes in English?

PERHAPS you do not make the same mistakes in English that Bob Turner makes in the little story above. His errors are easy to see. But do you make other mistakes which offend other people as much as these offend you?

How do you know that you do not mispronounce certain words? Are you always sure that your speech is grammatically correct, and that what you write is properly phrased? Or do you "grope" for words, and use only time-worn, colorless phrases to express your thoughts?

Unfortunately, it is so easy for just these "little slips," all unknown to you, to place serious obstacles in the way of your business career, and to handicap you socially more than you may ever imagine!

Your friends and associates may be too polite to correct you when you make mistakes; but they do make mental reservations about you. "He is ignorant and uncultured," they perhaps think. They may hesitate to welcome you into their groups. They may "think twice" before introducing you to others as a close friend. If they are doing you an injustice, it is solely because you permit your own use of English to give a wrong impression of you.

Free Booklet on English

Sherwin Cody, perhaps the best known teacher of practical English, has perfected and patented a remarkable device which will quickly find and correct mistakes you unconsciously make. Correct English soon becomes a HABIT, winning friends and favorably impressing those with whom you come in contact.

Mr. Cody's new invention, the 100% Self-Correcting Method, has already improved the English of more than 70,000 people. It involves no useless rules, no tedious copying, no hard study. In only 15 minutes a day you master correct English. Nothing like Mr. Cody's invention has ever been used before!

A free booklet, "How You Can Master Good English in 15 Minutes a Day," explains Mr. Cody's surprisingly easy method. Merely mail the coupon, a letter, or a postal card. SHERWIN CODY SCHOOL OF ENGLISH, 7410 Searle Building, Rochester, N. Y.

TIME was, when velvet meant either transparent or Lyons or chiffon weaves, that all one's efforts were bent toward keeping the pile erect, glossy, and unmarked by blemishes of any sort. Then came the uncut velvets, with their little looped surfaces giving a dull suede-like finish to the fabric, and now we have velvets that are smartest when they have been subjected to all sorts of rough treatment. The crushed velvets imitate the crinkled crêpes; the blistered velvets and the hammered velvets describe themselves.

NuBack CORSETRY

Why shop for a corset when NuBack* will save you that weariness . . . and many others. NuBack* garments have been designed with an ingenious telescopic back section which permits unrestricted movement of the body in perfect comfort. They remain in place on the figure. Ask in any corset department for NuBack* corsets or foundations and they may be procured for you.

In these ultra modern creations the possibility of diaphragm protrusions has been removed so that you may "enjoy" a perfectly molded figure. To the actual comfort in a corset that WILL NOT RIDE UP you may add the pleasure of "knowing" that it will not. NuBack* has eliminated all dread of having to pull your corset in place. The secret is in the clever design. When you stoop or sit in your NuBack* it extends (shown by dotted line in the illustration). When you stand up, it instantly and unnoticeably contracts with the same natural action as the muscles.

NuBack* creations may be had through your favorite corsetiere or corset department. Ask for them.

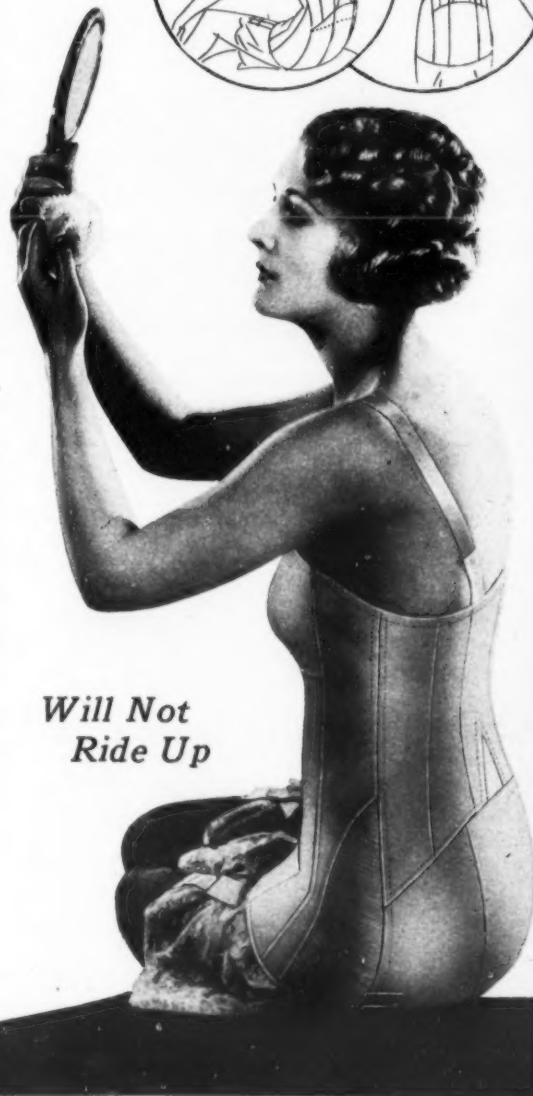

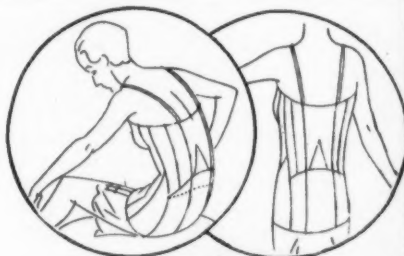

The prices are moderate—

FOOTNOTES ON A WEEK'S HEADLINERS

[From The New York Times.]

THE LIVING SYMBOL.

BACK in 1915, Berlin's Platz der Republik was Königsplatz. In its centre rose a sixty-foot wooden statue, and as the months passed by its dull color was transformed into a metallic sheen. Long queues of people stood first to await their turn to buy iron, silver and gold nails and then to drive those nails into the wooden effigy. The money went for war relief purposes, but what the donors were out of pocket was repaid several-fold in less tangible yet more lasting values. For that rude wooden statue, as ugly as an Alaskan Indian's totem-pole, was an inspiration to steadfastness.

Hindenburg.

The two names of the Berlin square signify the change in the German nation. As for the model for that inspiration to steadfastness, he has become the living symbol of the same virtue. Symbols should be ageless and deathless, but living symbols must have birthdays, and Sunday Paul von Beneckendorff und von Hindenburg, President of Germany, was 85.

About the President's Palace in Berlin was none of the nervousness of anxious days. There was no confusion, excitement or haste; no ostentation or officiousness. The atmosphere was one of calm and simplicity. There was an illusion that the occupant was a man who has lived a sheltered life.

A visibly tranquil but scarcely a sheltered life—Hindenburg has lived not one life but three. Had he died in 1913 he would have been 66, retired from the army and forgotten to the world. Two years before there were some army manoeuvres in the Mazurian Lake region of East Prussia. General von Hindenburg was deferentially critical of the Kaiser's handling of one of the manoeuvring armies. The sequel was that the General retired, having achieved both the legal age limit and gallstones. His first life was over.

Hindenburg's second life began in the Fall of 1914 and in the same Mazurian Lake country where his first life ended. Russian armies were sweeping across East Prussia. German forces were in retreat. Hindenburg's name was scratched from the retired list and with Eric Ludendorff as his Chief-of-Staff he was on his way to the Eastern front. The Russians were stopped, 92,000 prisoners were taken and 70,000 drowned in the lakes. The staff work was Ludendorff's (or General Hoffmann's, as some say), the victory was Hindenburg's. His second life was a symbol.

It ended in 1918 and the armistice. Again Hindenburg retired to Hamburg. He was summoned back at the age of 77. Again Germany needed a symbol of steadfastness—and unity. That was typified by Hindenburg, trained in loyalty to monarchy, taking the oath to uphold the German Constitution as President of the Republic. Five years ago it was said that if the President lived out his term he would be 85 on his retirement. In his eighty-fifth year President Hindenburg entered his second term as head of the German Reich.

"I have been called by age and office to live and work," he said.

"What do you do, sir, when you get nervous?" asked an interviewer.

"I whistle."

"I have never heard you whistle."

"I never have."

HOOVER—"THE NERVE, TRYING TO GET MY GAL!"

OUR ONLY SULTAN.

THE Sultan of Sulu, the only hereditary potentate under the American flag, is short seven islands, and one of his adopted daughters is going to law about it in Manila. She is claiming title to fourteen islands between the Philippines and Borneo, while government geographers are able to name only seven.

Sultan Jamarul Kiram II was not only the inspiration to George Ade for a musical comedy. He is the spiritual ruler of 200,000 Malay Moslems. His domain is Islam's easternmost boundary, but whereas his subjects pray toward Mecca, their petitions go to Washington, for they have no enthusiasm over the prospect of Filipino rule. The Sultan is on Uncle Sam's payroll for $3,000 a year; considering the fact that this is about the stipend of a United States Senator's secretary, there is little doubt that he earns it.

Sultan of Sulu.

The Sultan is now in his sixties. He does not file his teeth like other Moros; instead, his smile is a flash of hoarded gold. Nor does he follow a native custom of chewing betel nut. The facts that the juice of this nut is arterial red and that the flooring of the second story of the Sultan's wooden palace is badly cracked gave William Jennings Bryan a Grand Guignol moment.

That was more than twenty-five years ago, but it is still one of the bright spots of the Sultan's reminiscences. During a tour around the world Mr. Bryan stopped off at Jolo for a visit with the Sultan, and while he was in audience with his Majesty on the ground floor Mrs. Bryan was taken upstairs to the harem for a chat with the betel-nut-chewing ladies. When an interpreter went into action transforming Bryanese into Moro, the American's eyes turned to the ceiling and then bulged with horror.

Through the floor of the room where Mrs. Bryan was taken was seeping a sinister red stream. Mr. Bryan shot from his chair and up the stairs. But it was not blood—merely one of the harem cuspidors had overturned.

A PRO-CONSUL.

TWO weeks ago Governor Beverley of Puerto Rico made his annual report to the Secretary of War. The island is subjected to increasing economic distress and a mounting population, and the only lasting solution of the problem the Governor sees is birth control. A few days later a hurricane swept across Puerto Rico, leaving 200 dead in its path. Nature has an ironic way in taking part in the disputes of man.

It is James R. Beverley's ambition—a temporary one, no doubt—to seem older than he really is. He is tall, bespectacled, growing bald, retiring and sparing of words. At 38 he is Governor of one of the most thickly populated lands in the world, and he became our Caribbean pro-consul last Winter when Theodore Roosevelt left Puerto Rico to be Governor General of the Philippines.

When he learned Spanish more than a quarter of a century ago, Governor Beverley was not preparing for a public career. He was punching cattle on his father's ranch in New Mexico, and his ambition was to become a locomotive engineer—a job which would take him away as rapidly as possible from practicing Spanish on Mexican ranch-hands and from watching calves grow into steers. His next ambition, doubtless for the same reasons, was to be a naval officer. He passed an Annapolis examination, but during a physical test at the Naval Academy some eye charts were wiggled in front of his nose and his vision was pronounced defective. His eyesight was good enough, however, for him to win the Puerto Rico pistol championship and to hold a place after the armistice on the A. E. F. rifle team at the inter-allied games.

Barred from Annapolis, Governor Beverley worked his way through the University of Texas, went overseas as a lieutenant of field artillery and then took up teaching. As a teacher he was more afraid of his age than his youth, and he decided that before he became too old he would study law, returning to the university. The law school dean, George C. Butte, was persuaded to run as a Republican candidate for Governor against Ma Ferguson. Reward for this sacrifice was appointment as Attorney General of Puerto Rico, and Dr. Butte took young Beverley with him as his deputy. Later Dr. Butte returned to the United States, eventually to go to the Philippines as Vice Governor General, whereupon his university pupil succeeded him as chief law officer in Puerto Rico.

A LION OF CRETE.

PREMIER ELEUTHERIOS VENIZELOS of Greece appears to have reached another turning point in a bewildering career of victory and defeat, of power and exile. Opposed by Royalists, Communists and a hostile Republican offshoot in last month's general election, his party has lost a majority.

When Greek meets Greek, up or down goes Venizelos. He is a native of mercurial Crete, but his temperature does not rise. He is a combination of superlatives and their antonyms. Theoretically he is a pacifist, yet he has had a part in the making of four wars. "I did not begin wars," he explains, "I only won them." He is the best loved and the most hated man in Greece. He has led uprisings and quelled mobs. He is a great statesman, yet a poor administrator. He seeks power through democracy, yet he hates demagoguery. He denies that he is a dictator, yet, "once I am chosen it is necessary that important things be determined by a single mind."

"In that case," observed Emil Ludwig, "I should like to be an Athenian under you, but not a Minister."

The lightninglike changes in the Venizelos political fortunes, his contempt for supporters, his friendly reasoning letters to adversaries, his banishments from power and his triumphs from exile are expressed in some of his philosophical observations. "It is certain that we possess the bad characteristics of the ancient Greeks, but do we possess the good ones? That is the question."

"I, for myself, am certainly not a Venizelist and do not want to be classed as such."

"If you can once show the crowd that it can influence you, it will always insist on making use of this damnable prerogative."

"It would be a fine sort of statesman who did not adjust himself to changed circumstances."

"Find out your enemies of yesterday, make them work with you—and you can be certain of success."

"Reversals are merely accidents on the road to success. In fact, a statesman can veritably thrive on defeats. He can withdraw for a time from public life and wait until people get tired of their present rulers."

Stop Worrying about Yourself!

Why fret yourself into old age 'way ahead of your time? Listen to this common sense about your body:

Eight hours' sleep is NOT essential to health. Overwork does NOT lead to nervous breakdown. A carefully planned diet is NOT necessary. Modern life is NOT too strenuous for your nerves. Constipation is NOT at the root of most physical ailments—nor is it caused by eating the wrong kind of food.

THAT is why nine out of ten suspected "disease symptoms" are pure bunk! The human body can stage marvelous comebacks, if you give it half a chance! You fear your common cold will develop into pneumonia. You see the spectre of lockjaw lurking in that pin-pricked finger. But do you know that the odds are 9 to 1 you already have actually had tuberculosis—and never even knew it? Do not resign yourself to that ache or pain because "it runs in my family"—when heredity probably has nothing to do with it!

In times like these, can you afford to handicap yourself with needless worry? Isn't it high time to throw overboard old and outworn scares and superstitions about your health and yourself?

To find real health assurance, read "THE HUMAN BODY"—Dr. Logan Clendening's delightfully written, easy-to-read masterpiece, hailed so enthusiastically by profession and public alike. Here is the fascinating, thrilling biography of YOU—your body, your weight, your health, your length of life, your food, your habits. It "debunks" physical fads and fallacies and replaces them with the true, common-sense facts about the human machine.

Thousands paid $5.00 for this book and it was worth it. Now you may have it for only ONE DOLLAR!—399 pages, printed from the original plates on high-grade paper. Lavishly illustrated with 102 exciting pictures—tricks nature plays, private photographs, rare old prints; map showing globe regions of the U. S.; picture of the first successful abdominal operation; actual photograph of one of the first operations under ether; a strange 1802 cartoon against vaccination—scores of other accurate, revealing photos, charts, diagrams.
